

Dear Sir/Madam.

As a concerned citizen, I forward a communication from the Alliance for Rights-Oriented Drug Policies (AROD). As you can see from this correspondence, there is increasing evidence that our drug policies represent a grave violation of our human rights. The letter will explain this further, and you also receive a PDF called To End a War which will elaborate and provide evidence for the allegations.

As you can see from this information, the drug laws' alleged incompatibility with our catalogue of rights is well documented. I have looked at it myself, and I think that it is time you and other politicians familiarize yourselves with the rights-oriented debate and its implications. I also think that the relationship between drug policy and human rights law is a most serious matter that you should make every effort to clarify for us, and as this can only be done under the auspices of an independent, impartial and competent commission, I ask that you assist us in the creation of such a commission, either nationally or internationally.

I look forward to hearing from you regarding this, and I will pass on your response to the Alliance for Rights-Oriented Drug Policies.

Yours Sincerely,
